

1,000,000 Hunters United

Tell me why you hunt and love animals at the same time! I know myself, but I want to hear your best answer!

24 November at 17:44

 4 people like this.

Camille Winger You have to respect the animals you hunt. That means being responsible enough to know when to take a shot, and when to pass it up. And just getting to know their lifestyles. Hunting is so much more than just killing an animal! I don't know if that answered the question...

24 November at 17:48 · Flag

Kim Keeling Huett Love to hunt for love the peace and quiet of nature. All problems of life seem to drift away and am able to enjoy nature at its best. But nothing like the adrenaline that flows through your body when that big buck comes within the kill zone. We only hunt certain size bucks and the meat is put to full use. My family has a great respect for animals especially mature buck deer. They are smart and give us a challenge each year to hunt. And when we do take a buck we always respect them by making sure they are cleaned up before pictures are provided. We try to let them get to full grown mature status before taking them out.

24 November at 17:49 · Flag

Tj Sisk Short answer, me and my family love to eat.

24 November at 17:57 · Flag

Ron Kyle We are nature so I respect nature. Hunting is a natural instinct and the natural raw feeling and respect for all animals. I see the awesomeness in all creatures and its strange how I still enjoy photograph hunt as well as kill hunt. Its not the killing aspect its the raw grit to honor and tame all at once.

24 November at 18:13 via Facebook Mobile · Flag

Cody Waldo I hunt bc of the feeling I get when I see that monster buck or them geese and ducks locked up or that monster tom strutting right to me and the day I don't feel that feeling anymore is the day I will stop hunting

24 November at 18:28 · Flag

Alan Bessler I love animals because they are animals hunt them 4 a couple of reasons nautrul non chemchal hormone non iduced meat and i happen to like and belive in the fact that a hunters goal is to take the animal as fast and with as little pain as possible think its better than getting hit by a car and struggling for 2-3 days or overpopulating into starvation

24 November at 18:56 via Facebook Mobile · Flag

Gerdus Van Rooyen Being a Game Ranger I also do hunting on a regular basis. Its about keeping the balance and taking on the role as a natuaraal selector taking out the old and weak bulls. Normaly they also the trophy bulls!

24 November at 21:23 via Facebook Mobile · Flag

Gerdus Van Rooyen Being a Game Ranger I also do hunting on a regular basis. Its about keeping the balance and taking on the role as a natuural selector taking out the old and weak bulls. Normaly they also the trophy bulls!

24 November at 21:23 via Facebook Mobile · Flag

Bernard James Price In my country (The UK) the top predators Bears Wolves had been wiped out by the 18th Century.Man therefore had the role of keeping a balance.Deer and foxes can become too numerous damaging the eco-structure so it is hardly surprising that many of the famous hunters originate from here.An expanding Empire also caused the same conflicts.As a child I was inspired greatly by Jim Corbett books.If you read them you see his great respect for the animals and native peoples even though he mostly hunted man eaters with great skill.I have visited the museum in India dedicated to him.The freedom of the chase be it a hard riding fox hunt or a patient wait in the forest is always exciting.True hunters are nature experts by experience.I would rather shoot nothing and just have the privilege oft a day in the wilds with friends in the hope that I might!

25 November at 01:30 · Flag

Bernard James Price Oops(continued)I am a lecturer in Nature/Game conservation at a local college.I mainly shoot driven pheasants or decoy for wild pigeons. I train my dogs to flush / retrieve.I like rough shooting best!I have . in my time hunted in many countries . Perhaps Elk in Norway , Wild Boar in Poland ,Partridge in Iran were the most memorable because I saw many rare animals ,plants and birds which I never would experienced otherwise!.

25 November at 01:38 · Flag

Brian Whaley Genesis Chpt 9 vs 1-3....So God blessed Noah and his sons and said to them: "Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be on every beast of the earth, on every bird of the air, on all that move on the earth, and on all of the fish of the sea. They are given into your hand. Every moving things that lives shall be food for you." (NKJV)...I think God gave us dogs for pets to remind how we should love one another unconditionally.

25 November at 03:44 · Flag

Ed Guptill Guptill I hunt because I love to spend time with all of God creation. I admire how animals socialize in their way the same as we do. God put them on earth for us to use as food. God also gave us animals to show us how to love with out condition as our pet love us, we should love each other/

25 November at 05:12 · Flag

Mac Salmono for me, it's a deep intrinsic connection with nature and animals -- very spiritual per se, not in a new age way, but is just part of who I am, I have always "had a way with animals" -- mean dogs are not mean with me, I can read and track animals almost intuitively, I tend to have alot of close encounters with bears here in Alaska, etc. In my ancestry are native peoples and I think that's got much to do with it, some animals are totems or guides -- highly regarded, almost as an elder per se, these are critters I could never hunt myself, I have no issue with others hunting them, but I cannot do so for some reason. Wolves for example. Because I am one (a predatory animal) myself, hunting just comes natural; hunting blood runs through my veins, just like all predators, hunting is just instinctual and as much a part of me and my life, as the breathing of air/ oxygen. Hunting is not an "activity" nor even a sport for me. It is part of me; it's who I am. If that makes sense!

25 November at 08:29 ·  1 person · Flag

Jacqueline Scott i love getting out there in the countryside, its lovely whatever the weather, i have pets that i love to take out for long walks but i also love to hunt, its a natural process, the chase is exciting and the food for survival, its our instinct, keep it going...

25 November at 09:05 · Flag